“2024 was another difficult year in the digital learning market. The pressure to demonstrate that learning counts have sharpened, and vendors are working hard to show how they can contribute to their customers. The market is still very active, however, skills needs are a major driver, and the ability to practice, rehearse, and gain feedback is shaping solutions. And, of course, investment in AI is universal,” said Myles Runham, Lead Analyst at the Fosway Group.

“We are proud to be recognized as a Strategic Leader in digital learning by the Fosway Group for the third consecutive year, a testament to the continued trust our clients place in us and the impact of our work in transforming learning. At NIIT, we are committed to leading from the front in an ever-evolving L&D landscape. As organizations face accelerated change, we continue to innovate by leveraging AI in content development, enabling our clients to create learning at the speed of business. This recognition reaffirms our mission to deliver future-ready, high-impact digital learning solutions that empower workforce transformation at a global scale,” said Sailesh Lalla, Chief Business Officer at NIIT MTS.
